A. C. Jones, Once Candidate for Governor of South Carolina,

Spartanburg, S. C., January 15.--A.
C. Jones, a native of Newberry County, and one of the best known traveling men of the State, and one time candidate for Governor of South Carolina on the Democratic ticket, ended his life here to-day shortly before noon by firing a pistol ball into his brain. Death was instantaneous.

Mr. Jones had been unwell for several days suffering from an attack of the grippe, but was thought to be much improved. He told his wife he was going to step to an outhouse to bring in some wood and it was while there that he fired the ball into his temple. Mr. Jones had been in the limelight recently by reason of his conspicuous place as chairman of the committeee of the Travellers Protective Association and United Commercial Travelers in their fight against the railroads for laws requiring mileage to be exchanged for tickets.
